What Greater Works Will You Do?

By ANGEL CHAVEZ

“Most assuredly, I say to you, he who believes in Me, the works that I do he will do also; and greater works than these he will do, because I go to My Father”. John 14:12

Jesus is talking to all believers...

WHICH WORKS EXACTLY? I guess everything that Jesus did in establishing the Kingdom of His Father. WHICH WORKS exactly?

“And when He had called His twelve disciples to Him, He gave them power over unclean spirits, to cast them out, and to heal all kinds of sickness and all kinds of disease.”

Matthew 10:1

“...And as you go, preach, saying, ‘The kingdom of heaven is at hand.’ Heal the sick, cleanse the lepers, raise the dead, cast out demons. Freely you have received, freely give.” Matthew 10:6-8

PLEASE REMEMBER THESE ARE ONLY SOME WORKS RECORDED IN OUR BIBLE, AND JESUS IS TALKING ABOUT THESE AND GREATER WORKS? Sadly, most of our churches are very busy teaching the congregation how to be a religious Christian, without any authority and power?

AND THEN, I ALSO HEARD SOME SAY THAT JESUS WAS ABLE TO DO THESE WORKS BECAUSE HE WAS ACTING AS GOD IN THE FLESH. Well, I don't think so. In the book of Philippians says that Jesus emptied Himself of Godly powers like “All Powerful”, “All knowing”, “Ever-present”. Yes, his nature was always sinless, divine and One with the Father, but when it comes to fight the enemy, and doing the works of the kingdom, He did it as a mere human being filled by the Holly Spirit. “Let this mind be in you which was also in Christ Jesus, who, being in the form of God, did not consider it robbery to be equal with God, but made Himself of no reputation, (Other translation reads: Jesus emptied Himself) taking the form of a bondservant, and coming in the likeness of men. And being found in appearance as a man, He humbled Himself and became obedient to the point of death, even the death of the cross.”

Philippians 2:5-8

THERE IS AT LEAST TO IMPORTANT REASONS TO CONSIDER: God is proving that Adam was equipped with everything he needed to defeat Satan, and when Jesus demands from us that we do the same works he did and greater works, it proofs that we are equally equipped with power and authority. We must be all equipped with all we need to do the Job that Jesus demands from us. Because He was anointed to do what He did by The Holly Spirit. And therefore, He defeated the enemy and did all those works as a man anointed by Holly Spirit. “How God anointed Jesus of Nazareth with the Holy Spirit and with power, who went about doing good and healing all who were oppressed by the devil, for God was with Him.” Acts 10:38

GOD IS A FAIR GOD! EVEN WITH SATAN: Satan, who defeated Adam, the first man, by making him break God's Word; Jesus defeated Satan just like a man, filled with the Holly Spirit, by quoting and activating God's Word. The Word that holds all creation in place and keeps it functioning like a Swiss watch. God the father had equipped Adam with everything he needed to defeat Satan any time all the time, [Adam talked to God every day], just like Jesus did destroy Satan and his kingdom, by quoting and activating God's Word. And I think we all need to learn to believe and activate God's Word if we are ever going to fulfil

Should Parents Create a Strict Summer Schedule or Offer More Flexibility? Expert Weighs In

Source: MOMSWHOTHINK.COM

What is the ideal summer schedule for kids? Should you maintain a structured routine, similar to the one you keep during the school year? Or can kids benefit from some unscheduled time when they can rest and play? It can be a delicate balance between an overly scheduled, rigid summer and a spontaneous one that perhaps devolves into chaos. Dr. Stacy Doumas, Chair of the Department of Psychiatry at Jersey Shore University Medical Center has some answers. Just how important is it for kids to have structure during their summer break?

Structure and Routine Help Kids' Well-being

Dr. Doumas explains that routines continue to be important, even during downtime. "From a mental health perspective, maintaining a sense of structure during the summer is indeed crucial for a child's wellbeing." She continues, "Routines, especially around bedtimes, wake-up times, and meals, provide a sense of predictability and security that helps children feel safe."

However, that doesn't mean you need to schedule every minute of their time. "While the summer schedule can certainly be more relaxed than the school year's, consistency is key to keeping your child comfortable and cooperative," she says. "A lack of a consistent sleep schedule, for example, can disrupt a child's internal clock for weeks and has been linked to everything from irritability and poor behavior to long-term health concerns. Think of this basic routine as the foundation upon which you can build a summer that also allows for spontaneous deviations, like special outings or vacations, which are equally vital for a healthy, happy break."

Unstructured Time Builds Resilience in Kids

In fact, letting kids have free time without expectations is more than just fun for your kids; it also helps them learn important life skills. "Unstructured time is essential for fostering imagination and free play," says Dr. Doumas. "This is a critical component of healthy development. Research shows that this type of child-led, spontaneous play — free from predetermined rules or adult direction — is where children build crucial life skills. When they have to invent their own games, they are exercising creativity and critical thinking.

"When they play with others, they learn to negotiate, collaborate, share, and resolve conflicts on their own terms. This free time also helps them develop a sense of independence and learn to regulate their own emotions, which are important skills for building resilience."

Finding the Balance Between Structure and Spontaneity

Dr. Doumas explains, "There are definite downsides to the extremes of a completely unstructured summer and an overly rigid one. Too much freedom can lead to a lack of routine that negatively impacts children's moods and well-being. Without the scaffolding of a schedule, some children and teens experience boredom, loneliness, and understimulation, which can sometimes lead to anxiety or depression."

However, too rigid a schedule may be harmful as well. "On the flip side, an overly rigid and packed summer schedule can create significant stress and

Stay Alert this Summer

As we move into the June, we begin to see a shift here in Florida, longer days, rising temperatures, increased travel, and the early stages of summer weather patterns. With that change comes a need to refocus on a few key public safety areas that can make a real difference for you and your family.

First, let's talk about heat. Even though summer has not officially arrived, temperatures inside a parked vehicle can rise dangerously fast. It only takes a few minutes for conditions to become life threatening, especially for children, pets, and the elderly. Always take a moment to check your back seat before locking your vehicle. If you see a child or animal left inside a car, do not hesitate to call for help. That quick decision could save a life.

With school events, graduations, and travel picking up, this month also brings more traffic to our roadways. We ask everyone to remain patient and alert. Distracted driving continues to be one of the leading causes of crashes. Put the phone down, keep your eyes on the road, and watch for pedestrians, especially in neighborhoods and near schools. Those few seconds of attention matter more than most realize.

Another area of concern this time of year is severe weather. Afternoon storms can develop quickly, bringing lightning, heavy rain, and sudden reductions in visibility. If you are driving and conditions worsen, slow down, turn on your headlights, and give yourself extra distance between vehicles. If lightning is present, seek shelter and avoid open areas. Having a basic emergency plan in place for your family, even something as simple as knowing where to go during a storm, is always a smart move.

As we head into more outdoor activities, boating and water safety should also be top of mind. Always wear a life jacket, ensure your vessel is properly equipped, and never operate under the influence. Florida's waterways are a great resource, but they demand respect and responsibility.

Lastly, I encourage everyone to stay connected with your community. Look out for your neighbors, report suspicious activity, and do not hesitate to reach out if you need assistance. Public safety is a shared responsibility, and I have the honor to serve alongside a community that consistently shows care and concern for one another.

From my family to yours, I wish you a safe and enjoyable month of June.

These 5 AI-proof jobs are hiring - Here's how much they pay and how to get them

Source: MORNINGSTAR.COM

As artificial intelligence evolves, tech companies are laying off employees. But some careers, including trade and healthcare jobs, have proven resilient to advancements in AI.

If you're feeling stuck in this job market, you're not alone.

The hiring landscape is tough right now, especially for younger workers and those in white-collar fields. As artificial intelligence continues to evolve, more than 90,000 tech employees across at least 98 companies have been laid off so far this year according to Layoffs.fyi, a project by startup founder Roger Lee tracking layoffs in the tech sector.

Employment shakeups at major tech companies in April alone have included 8,000 jobs cut at Meta (META) and voluntary buyouts offered to 7% of Microsoft's (MSFT) U.S. workforce. Oracle (ORCL) also began the process of laying off 30,000 people to cut costs as the cloud-services company builds out expensive AI data centers.

Despite the recent wave of tech layoffs, AI adoption is still concentrated in certain parts of the economy, particularly industries like information services, finance and professional services, where firms are more likely to integrate the technology into day-to-day work. About 19% of U.S. companies have integrated AI into their day-to-day operations, a number that is expected to rise to 22.3% in the next six months, according to a March 2026 Goldman Sachs (GS) report citing Census Bureau data.

Careers that are resilient to AI right now share a few common traits: They require a physical presence, specialized training or real-time human interaction, which AI still struggles to replicate.

"You want your nurse to be a human, but you are probably OK with an AI running your software," said Sneha Puri, an economist at Indeed Hiring Lab.

But that doesn't mean jobs that look safe from AI for now will remain insulated forever. It's worth thinking about how quickly change can happen, said Roy Cohen, a career counselor and former Wall Street executive based in New York.

"At the turn of the 20th century, people were still in horses and buggies ... they didn't likely envision that there'd be an automobile to replace a buggy. But that's what happened," Cohen said. "Long term, none of us can ever predict with any certainty what it's going to look like. We can just appreciate that it's going to be different."

Whether you are a career changer, have a kid deciding on a college major or just got laid off yourself and are looking for some stability in an ever-changing AI world, here are five AI-resilient jobs that aren't going anywhere anytime soon. Pay figures come from Indeed's estimated median annual salary for each role.

Job: Cardiac Medical Technician

Salary: $133,907

Requirement: Associate's degree, specialized certification

The healthcare industry was "basically the only sector driving any job growth across the labor market in the United States" over the past year, Puri said, partly because of the country's aging population. The data backs her up: The job market has added an average of about 56,000 healthcare jobs per month for the past three months, accounting for a large share of the roughly 68,000 total jobs added monthly over the same period, according to the Bureau of Labor Statistics.

So it's no surprise that the role at the top of Indeed's 2026 index of the best jobs in the U.S. falls within the sector. Cardiac medical technicians assist physicians in diagnosing and treating blood-vessel diseases, and the field has seen a significant boost in job postings over the past three years. The job requires operating specialized equipment, monitoring patients and responding in real time, making it difficult to automate.

Wages for cardiac medical techs have grown 34% over the past three years to a six-figure salary, though many of the highest-paying roles are highly specialized. The Bureau of Labor Statistics lists median pay in 2024 for cardiovascular technicians, a broader category that includes heart-test and imaging technicians, much lower at about $67,000.

Pay can vary widely depending on specialization, setting and hours. Hospital-based roles, for example, often come with

overtime, bonuses and higher pay for night or weekend shifts that can push total earnings well above base pay.

Job: HVAC Technician

Salary: $70,085

Requirements: State-mandated certification

Some of the most AI-resilient jobs are in the skilled trades, where work must be done in person.

HVAC technicians install and repair heating and cooling systems in homes, offices and industrial buildings - work that requires physical labor and problem-solving in real-world environments.

Demand is also getting a boost from AI itself. Data centers, which power AI systems, require extensive cooling infrastructure, driving additional need for technicians. Job postings for HVAC roles have surged 93% over the past three years, according to Indeed data.

Job: Pest-Control Technician

Salary: $52,253

Requirements: State-mandated certification

The job targeting cockroaches, ants, mice and rats is less vulnerable to being replaced by AI. Pest control requires specialized expertise and non-repetitive work that's done in the real world. It also involves the ability to communicate with stressed customers who want insects and vermin gone - and the stomach to accomplish the task.

"For jobs that require physical skills, AI replacement risk is still quite low," said Felix Aidala, an economist at Indeed Hiring Lab. But pest control has an extra advantage. AI's top risk for many blue-collar workers is that the technology provides customers with the ability to solve problems instead of calling a professional, he said.

Perhaps people could use AI to identify the weird bug crawling under their bed, he said. But "it's hard to see homeowners putting up their own fumigation tents."

As another bright spot, there's no shortage of bugs - and pest control companies are looking for employees. More than one-third of pest-control businesses said their growth last year was constrained by having too few technicians, according to the National Pest Management Association.

Real earnings, including overtime and bonuses, routinely exceed the $48,000 to $55,000 range and jobs have good insurance benefits with room to grow, according to the organization. Some technicians make up to $100,000 and possibly more at the right company, according to one Reddit thread. "The potential to build a long-term, well-compensated career in this industry is very real," the National Pest Management Association told MarketWatch.

Job: Licensed Professional Counselor

Salary: $107,812

Requirements: Master's degree and state licensure

Jobs that rely on emotional intelligence are also less exposed to AI disruption.

Licensed professional counselors work directly with patients to address mental-health challenges that require trust, communication and real-time judgment - areas where AI tools can assist but not replace professionals.

"Right now [these roles are] just not replaceable, because AI is not sophisticated enough to present not a voice so much as a profile that can be compassionate," Cohen said.

The role typically requires a master's degree and state license, which can create a higher barrier to entry, but also supports more stable demand.

Pay for owner-operator truck drivers can be high, but it varies widely depending on demand, operating costs and how much drivers are able to work.

Job: Owner-Operator Truck Driver

Salary: $160,000

Requirements: Commercial driver's license

Driving roles have also remained relatively insulated from AI, even as automation advances. While self-driving technology continues to develop, widespread adoption - especially for long-haul routes and under unpredictable conditions - is still limited.

Owner-operator truck drivers, who typically own or lease their own vehicles, play a critical role in moving goods across the country. The job requires navigating real-world conditions, managing schedules and maintaining equipment.

Pay can be high, but it varies widely depending on demand, operating costs and how much drivers are able to work. ♦

The 10 Best and Worst Bedtime Snacks

Source: EVERYDAYHEALTH.COM

Who doesn't love putting up their feet and tucking into a bowl of popcorn or ice cream at the end of a long day? While the occasional bedtime snack is fine, capping off every day with sweet or salty fare may spell trouble.

"Snacking later into the night increases the chance of weight gain, obesity, and cardiometabolic diseases," says Kristin Kirkpatrick, RD, a dietitian and author of Skinny Liver: A Proven Program to Prevent and Reverse the New Silent Epidemic — Fatty Liver Disease.

Many of us are more likely to reach for less-than-healthy foods in the evening, and you can blame your body's built-in survival mechanisms for this. Research has shown that our circadian rhythms (the body's internal processes that follow a 24-hour cycle) raise our hunger and cravings for sweet, salty, and carbohydrate-heavy foods when we're tired — which tends to be at nighttime after a long day, for most of us.

The downside of late-night cravings is that they can add unnecessary calories that lead to significant weight gain if left unchecked. Research explains that late-night eating could throw off our internal clocks and may be associated with higher total caloric intake and body mass index (BMI).

"To offset these innate cravings, I have found that your first defense should be drinking a glass of water or [caffeine-free] tea, rather than heading to the snack pantry," Kirkpatrick says.

Ideally, you'll stop eating two to three hours before going to bed. If you're actually hungry and you need a snack to dip into slumber, chances are you're not eating enough during the day, Kirkpatrick explains. Still, if you do need to eat, or you crave a quick bite before bed, "it is important to choose a small, low-calorie, nutrient-dense snack at this time of the day," Kirkpatrick says.

In fact, some snacks contain nutrients that may relax your body, helping you fall and stay asleep. Read on to discover the best bedtime snacks, as well as the snacks to avoid before getting some sleep.

1. Best: Tart Cherries and Juice

Tart cherries contain melatonin, a key hormone for regulating sleep. Eating fresh tart cherries or juice increases the level of melatonin in the body, which helps you get to sleep a little easier, according to Kirkpatrick.

While studies on the effect of tart cherries on sleep are still ongoing, early research suggests that tart cherries may improve sleep quality, increase sleep duration, boost melatonin levels, and decrease inflammation.

If you choose to go the tart cherry juice route, skip fruit juice concentrates, as these typically contain added sugar.

When choosing a juice, opt for one that's labeled 100 percent fruit juice; it will contain more nutrients and fewer additives than a sweetened fruit juice or a juice concentrate. But beware that even 100 percent fruit juice is usually quite high in sugar. If you find cherry juice too tart, try diluting it to taste with water or plain seltzer.

2. Worst: Ice Cream

Traditional ice cream is high in saturated fats and added sugars, which can trigger cravings that lead to overeating, according to Jonathan Valdez, RDN, CDCES, the owner of Genki Nutrition in New York City.

Plus, "the amount of sugar in ice cream increases blood sugar and makes it more difficult to get to sleep and stay asleep," Kirkpatrick says.

3. Best: Almonds or Walnuts

"A small handful of nuts will satisfy cravings and hunger while inducing sleepiness," Kirkpatrick says. That's because nuts like walnuts and almonds offer natural melatonin, zinc, and magnesium.

Research also suggests that magnesium intake is associated with longer sleep and better sleep quality. Just ensure the nuts have low or no added sodium, because "salt can disrupt the sleeping cycle," Kirkpatrick says.

4. Worst: Chocolate

Like ice cream, chocolate tends to be high in sugar, meaning it's not the wisest option

Intermittent Fasting: What Is It, And How Does It Work?

By: HOPKINSMEDICINE.ORG

What is intermittent fasting?

Many diets focus on what to eat, but intermittent fasting is all about when you eat. It limits eating to specific time windows to support metabolic changes like burning fat after sugar stores in the body are depleted. With intermittent fasting, you only eat during a specific time of the day or on certain days of the week. Research shows fasting for a certain number of hours each day or eating just one meal a couple days a week may have health benefits.

How does intermittent fasting work?

Intermittent fasting works by prolonging the period when your body has burned through the calories consumed during your last meal and begins burning fat.

“Intermittent fasting contrasts with the normal eating pattern for most Americans, who eat throughout their waking hours,” Mattson says. “If someone is eating three meals a day, plus snacks, and they’re not exercising, then every time they eat, they’re running on those calories and not burning their fat stores.”

In prehistoric times, before humans learned to farm, they were hunters and gatherers who evolved to survive — and thrive — for long periods without eating. Our bodies still operate in this same mode. Mattson says that after hours without food, the body exhausts its sugar stores and starts burning fat. He refers to this as metabolic switching.

What are the different intermittent fasting plans?

• Daily Approach

The daily approach restricts daily eating to one six- to eight-hour period each day. For instance, you may choose to try 16/8 fasting: eating during an eight-hour window and fasting for 16 hours.

• 5:2 Approach

The 5:2 approach involves eating regularly five days a week. For the other two days, you limit yourself to one 500–600 calorie meal. An example would be if you chose to eat normally on every day of the week except Mondays and Thursdays, which would be your one-meal days.

Longer periods without food, such as 24-, 36-, 48- and 72-hour fasting periods, are not necessarily better for you, and may be dangerous. Going too long without eating might actually encourage your body to start storing more fat in response to starvation.

How long does it take for intermittent fasting to work?

Mattson’s research shows that it can take two to four weeks before the body becomes accustomed to intermittent fasting. You might feel hungry or cranky while you’re getting used to the new routine. But, he observes, research subjects who make it through the adjustment period tend to stick with the plan because they notice they feel better.

What can I eat while fasting?

- While fasting:

- Water
- Zero-calorie beverages such as black coffee and tea

- When eating normally:

- Mediterranean diet: Most nutrition experts regard the Mediterranean diet as a good blueprint of what to eat, whether you’re trying intermittent fasting or not. You can hardly go wrong when you pick leafy greens, healthy fats, lean protein and complex, unrefined carbohydrates such as whole grains.
- Wide range of foods: What some experts like about intermittent fasting is that it allows for a range of different foods to be eaten — and enjoyed. Sharing good, nutritious food with others and savoring the mealtime experience adds satisfaction and supports good health.

- Avoid high-calorie foods: Research shows that you’re not likely to lose weight or get healthier if you pack your feeding times with high-calorie food or a much larger volume than you typically eat for a meal.

What are the benefits of intermittent fasting?

Here are some intermittent fasting benefits research has revealed so far:

- Thinking and memory. Studies discovered that intermittent fasting boosts working memory in animals and verbal memory in adult humans.
- Heart health. Intermittent fasting improved blood pressure and resting heart rates as well as other heart-related measurements.

What's the Cost of a Home Gym in 2026?

Source: GARAGEGYMREVIEWS.COM

So, you want to build a gym at home, and you're wondering, "How much does a home gym cost?" You're not alone; this is by far one of the most asked questions we receive. We've detailed just how much you can expect to spend, and trust us when we say it's likely much less than you think. A home gym can not only be built on a budget, but it can also be an extremely smart financial decision.

How Much Does a Home Gym Cost?

As with any hobby, a home gym can be extremely costly at the start. That said, it doesn't have to be; in fact, you can start a home gym with as little money as you have, or even nothing but the things you have lying around the house. We want to bust the myth that a home gym is only for the wealthy and well-to-do.

A home gym, if used properly, has the power to benefit everyone physically, mentally, and fiscally. We've seen people drive down debt, increase energy, and decrease body fat through the building of a gym in their home or garage.

We'll get into the details throughout this article, but here's a quick overview of how much you can expect to spend on a home gym.

Type of Gym	Cost Range	What You Get
Budget gym	$300-$1,000	Dumbbells, kettlebells, budget cardio equipment
Mid-range	$1,000-$3,000	Power rack, barbell, dumbbells, weight plates, bench
Full gym	$3,000-$6,000	Add cardio, rack accessories, and flooring
Commercial-grade gym	$6,000+	Commercial versions of all gym equipment

Why You Should Build a Home Gym

Have you ever wondered why everyone in your life with a home gym is constantly telling you how great it is? I was that way. Before I started my garage gym, I worked out at a CrossFit gym, paying for both my wife and I to work out at a gym that we certainly enjoyed, but we still saw many areas for improvement.

I noticed that although our monthly membership fee was around $200, we were spending much more when the gas, car maintenance, and time were factored in. Throw in the fact that the gym wasn't super close, and it began to seem pretty frivolous to be spending so much to use someone else's barbells and plates (especially considering how low quality the equipment was).

There are a few things that nearly everyone reading this could benefit from, and I certainly could then when I was a slave to the monthly gym membership. I'm talking about more time, money, and health.

More Time

Time is our most finite resource. You may feel like you have a very long life ahead of you (and I hope you do), but the reality is that time is ticking away, and we aren't guaranteed our next breath. I want to maximize my time here on Earth as much as possible and I believe others do, as well. Not only that, but when you factor in the cost of your time, your time-spending habits may change.

Every decision has a seemingly infinite amount of choices not chosen. Essentially, by saying I'm going to drive to the gym, pay for the gym, take a long time to use the gym, and drive home from the gym, is you saying "no" to an insane amount of things that would probably be better for you to say "yes" to, like more money.

More Money

A home gym (while still a cost, nonetheless) can, in fact, be a very frugal cost and money-saver if done properly. Think about this: The difference between a home gym and a commercial gym in terms of money spent is very similar to the difference in buying a car versus leasing a car.

When you buy a car outright, you own that car. You can do whatever you want with it, and it's yours. If you lease a car, you pay a fee to use somebody else's car. Leasing, also known as "fleecing" by various financial experts (I'm a former financial planner, so I've spent a lot of time with these concepts), is a much more expensive way to drive a car.

A home gym, like buying a car outright, is now yours to keep forever. Additionally, a home gym doesn't depreciate as quickly as a car (if bought following our suggestions), and never has to be upgraded unless you simply want to.

A home gym is also much cheaper over its lifespan versus a gym membership. We'll get into more of the nitty-gritty numbers in the next section, but a majority of home gyms could end up being cheaper for their owner in less than three years versus the cost of a commercial gym membership over an equivalent timeline.

More Health

The last thing that everyone reading this could benefit from is more health. More health will likely equal more time alive and, therefore, can mean more money made. Regardless of this, health is what all of you reading this are striving for.

You want better physical and mental health, both of these can be achieved by a home gym in a way a commercial gym can't facilitate. Think about the way you use a commercial gym, you go for an hour a few times each week, and that's it. A home gym is always there, always available to be used, and always taunting you to get better.

A home gym could truly be one of the best investments you make for your health, wealth, and happiness.

Home Gym Cost -vs- Gym Membership Cost

The cost of a home gym versus a membership for a commercial gym like a CrossFit Affiliate, Gold's Gym, or something similar is the main determinant for people considering home gym ownership. Sure, there are a ton of benefits to having a home gym, but I find that for most people, it simply comes down to cost.

"Can I build a home gym that allows me to accomplish my goals without ruining myself financially?"

I always find our purchasing decisions kind of funny. For instance, many of us are likely reading this on an expensive smartphone, which doesn't include the monthly cost of our unlimited everything plans. For reference, the latest iPhone at the time of writing, the iPhone 17, starts at $799, while the iPhone 17 Pro starts at $1,099.

I say this to illustrate the fact that it's become acceptable to purchase a 4-figure phone that must be upgraded every few years (many upgrade every year...don't worry, I do the same), but a purchase like a home gym that never has to be upgraded and can improve pretty much every area of your life is highly scrutinized. A home gym can literally be one of the best financial decisions you make, as well, and here's why:

According to research done by the Health & Fitness Association, the average gym membership in 2024 cost roughly $65 a month, which comes out to around $780 per year, and $7,800 every ten years.

To be fair, there are budget-friendly gyms like Planet Fitness that offer affordable memberships costing between $15 and $25 monthly, but not everyone has access to these types of affordable facilities.

So, if the cost of a commercial gym is currently around $780/year (this is also growing by ~3% per year due to inflation and other factors, FYI) which is $7,800/decade, then how does that compare to a home gym? Well, let's take a look.

First off, unfortunately, we have no accurate market data on people who have built a gym in their home. I'd love to come up with a number and declare it as fact, but that would be disingenuous, and I don't want to lead anyone astray.

What I will say, however, is that based upon what I see through the people who send us their setups, ask for advice, and offer recommendations, the average cost for a home gym is between $1,500 and $2,500 for most people. This number can be both less and much, much more, but this seems like what most people spend on their home gyms in the short term.

So, let's compare these numbers to a gym membership. As we've established, a membership to a local gym costs an average of $65 per month into perpetuity. If the average home gym costs $1,500, then it would take just only two years to recoup the costs of a very well-equipped setup in comparison to the average gym membership.

With the home gym, however, you have an asset that can be traded for other goods or money (and if you buy right, it will have outstanding resale value), and the only ongoing fee you have is the cost to keep the lights on in your garage or spare room.

If we're looking just at financials, to me, the cost of a home gym is a much better decision than a gym membership.

What You Need to Build a Home Gym

Now that I've at least drawn your interest in enough to have you consider a home gym, the next thing you need to determine is what equipment you should use to build your setup.

For most people, the equipment we suggest starting out with include:

- An Olympic barbell, A squat rack with a pull-up bar attached, Weight plates, A weight bench, An exercise bike and a rowing machine, air bike, jump rope, sled, or some other cardio machine (Alternatively, or in addition, you may consider an all-in-one home gym machine to serve multiple purposes.) There are a myriad of other tools that can be added to this setup, as well, such as adjustable dumbbells, kettlebells, a treadmill, lat pulldown, etc.

Another "nice to have" that not a lot of future home gym owners consider is flooring. This will add to your overall cost depending on the material you choose, but can also be economical if you get creative—horse stall mats, for example. Having appropriate flooring may save your garage from damage. You can learn more about this in our guide to the best home gym flooring.

We suggest starting small and building over time to save money and avoid having things sit in the corner or trying to salvage some of your money on Craigslist. Do not make the mistake of overbuying and underusing; you will be much better off buying less and upgrading over time. ♦

ANGEL'S STORY:

Building iCare Community Magazine with Heart, and Stepping Boldly Into What's Next.

Some community publications are built from a business plan. iCare Community Magazine was built from a human need: connection. The kind of connection that makes a place feel like home, especially when you're new, learning the rhythms of a community, and looking for familiar faces in unfamiliar streets. At the center of iCare is its publisher, Angel, a man whose story carries resilience, faith, family, and a deep belief that the people doing good work deserve to be seen. His journey is not just the background of the magazine. It's part of its heartbeat.

Angel was born in Peru, the youngest of nine siblings. In a big family, you learn early how much relationships matter -the way people show up for one another, the way stories are shared, and the way love holds everyone together. That sense of family and belonging shaped him, and it still influences how he approaches community today.

This year has carried both grief and joy for Angel. He lost his oldest sister, Virginia, in February. Decades earlier, he also experienced the sudden loss of his brother Miguel, who passed away in a hunting accident about 30 years ago. Those moments leave marks that deepen your compassion and sharpen what you value.

At the same time, life has expanded in beautiful ways. Angel is now a proud grandfather of two. His oldest son, Isai, lives in Orlando with his wife Florence, and in early February they welcomed their first son, Josiah. Angel's daughter, Priscilla, lives in Texas with her husband Chandler, and they have a son named Elias Emmanuel. When Angel talks about his grandsons, there's joy in his voice. He jokes that if it were up to him, he'd have more than ten grandkids by now—and you can tell he means it. Family is his anchor.

Angel first came to the United States in 1979, arriving in Miami. Like so many immigrant stories, it was a beginning full of adjustment: new systems, new expectations, and a new language. But in 2003, his family made what he describes as a unanimous decision to move to the Treasure Coast. Angel relocated with his wife Margarita, their son Isai, and their daughter Priscilla—stepping into a new chapter with gratitude and hope.

He also stepped into a challenge he names with humility: learning English. "I'm still learning," Angel says. And yet, what he has built speaks fluently in the language that matters most - service, care, and sincerity.

Why iCare Exists: A Bridge Between People

Angel didn't create iCare because the world needed more content. He created it because he saw a gap: the Treasure Coast needed a stronger communication tool for the community, something that helped neighbors discover local professionals, learn about services, hear real testimonials, and feel less disconnected from one another.

There's something Angel says that many people, especially those who come from close-knit cultures, feel deeply: it can be lonely living somewhere new. "As a Latin person, we always feel loneliness and miss the element of familiarity," he explains. iCare became his answer to that loneliness: a way to build familiarity, spark relationships, and create shared pride.

That's why iCare focuses on local professionals and businesses - not as ads floating in a vacuum, but as people with stories. iCare highlights narratives, advice, and community testimony because Angel understands that trust isn't built only through a logo. It's built through recognition. Through story. Through being seen.

What also makes iCare different is that it isn't run from a distance. Angel personally knows many of his customers and contributors. Over time, relationships form. He shares their triumphs and their life trials. In many cases, he prays for them and with them. In a world that's becoming increasingly transactional, iCare has remained grounded in something more human.

Exalting the Good: Visibility That Builds Confidence

Angel has witnessed a powerful transformation over the years, and it often begins with hesitation.

Many local professionals are not eager to step into visibility. They're excellent at what they do, but uncomfortable "putting their face out there." Angel understands that. But he also understands something else: unrecognized excellence gets overlooked. He has seen professionals who were reluctant to be featured discover something unexpected on the other side of the spotlight: confidence. Not ego. Confidence. The kind that helps them serve more boldly and shows up with greater pride in what they offer. Angel believes too many people doing meaningful work go unrecognized, and that it isn't right. "We should always exalt the good," he says. That statement is not just personal value—it's a publishing philosophy.

iCare exists to elevate the people who elevate the Treasure Coast.

Business With Purpose: Profit and People Both Matter

Angel is practical about business. He knows business creates profit and security for our families—and he respects that. But he also believes that a life built only around financial accumulation misses the deeper point.

His outlook is shaped by faith and perspective: we don't take our bank accounts, houses, or cars with us. What remains is the impact we had, the relationships we built, and the way we treated people. Angel imagines a future where we see each other again and say thanks for being part of the journey in a positive way.

That worldview informs how iCare shows up. It's not just a magazine that helps people find services. It's a publication that encourages people to value one another - to recognize each other's contribution to the community, and to celebrate it while we can.

The Next Chapter: iCare Is Modernizing and Expanding

This moment is important for iCare because it marks a new chapter. Angel's vision has always been bigger than a single print cycle. If it were up to him, iCare would be part of every county in the United States. He also knows that kind of expansion requires the right team and support—he often speaks about praying to find a "Joseph," someone gifted in administration who can help carry the vision forward.

But what matters right now is this: iCare is evolving.

The Treasure Coast has so much more to offer than many people realize, and iCare is stepping forward to ensure those stories travel farther -digitally, socially, and strategically. We're making meaningful updates to modernize the magazine's footprint and expand our reach. That includes:

- Strengthening iCare's digital presence so more people can discover the magazine online
- Leveraging technology and digital marketing to increase reach, engagement, and consistency

Angel and his family during the early years of iCare Community Magazine

- Creating more opportunities for local professionals and businesses to be featured, trusted, and chosen
 - Expanding services and systems that support visibility—because great work shouldn't stay hidden
- This isn't change for the sake of change. It's modernization with purpose: to serve readers better, uplift local professionals more effectively, and build a stronger bridge between the community and the people who serve it.

A Tender Personal Note: Margarita's Legacy

Angel's story also holds a deeply personal loss. His wife, Margarita, passed away two years ago in Tradition. Her life mattered. Her presence matters still. Angel has invited the community to read her edition on the iCare website—a reminder that behind every publication is a family, a love story, and a legacy.

Stay Connected With iCare

iCare Community Magazine exists to help our region feel more connected, more informed, and more proud of the people doing good work right here at home. We're grateful for every reader and every business owner who believes in the power of local stories.

ARE YOU AFRAID TO FALL IN LOVE?

You May Be Experiencing Philophobia

Philophobia is a fear of falling in love. It can also be a fear of getting into a relationship or fear that you will not be able to maintain a relationship. Many people experience a minor fear of falling in love at some point in their lives. But in extreme cases, philophobia can make people feel isolated and unloved.

Philophobia is not a condition that a doctor can diagnose because it is not in the Diagnostic and Statistical Manual of Mental Disorders (DSM). That is the guide that mental health professionals use to determine if someone has the criteria for a specific mental illness or mental health disorder. Even so, mental health professionals can often help with philophobia if it is affecting your life negatively.

Causes of Philophobia

The fear of falling in love has many potential causes, including:

- Past experiences. Traumatic past relationships may contribute to the development of the fear of falling in love. Infidelity, betrayal, or heartbreak can cause you to stay away from romantic relationships. Other types of relationships can also give someone this fear, like parental relationships and close friendships.
- Cultural experiences. In some cultures, there's more pressure to marry at a young age under specific circumstances. If someone does not want to have this traditional experience, it can lead to philophobia.

- Fear of rejection. Putting yourself out there can be scary. Studies show that rejection can have similar results in the body to physical pain. Most people are able to get over rejection, but if you have experienced several painful rejections, the fear of another one can stay with you.

Symptoms of Philophobia

The symptoms of this fear are different for each person. However, many people with philophobia experience:

- Lack of intimate relationships
- Always feeling anxious in relationships

In relationship situations or when thinking about relationships, you may also have:

- Rapid heart rate
- Shallow breathing
- Panic or anxiety attacks which may include chest pains

Risks of Philophobia

People who have lingering or more extreme cases of philophobia may have an increased risk of:

- Depression
- Anxiety
- Substance abuse
- Suicidal ideation

Treatments for Philophobia

Most people experience some fear or resistance to intimacy or falling in love at some point in their lives. However, it can become a problem if your philophobia is causing you significant distress. If that's the case for you, treatment is available.

The main treatment suggested for philophobia is to seek therapy or counseling. You can work with a mental health professional. They may go over your past relationships to identify what is causing your fear of falling in love. They may give you relaxation exercises or other types of therapeutic homework to help you feel more comfortable with dating and relationships.

Therapists may use cognitive behavioral therapy (CBT) to help you notice the thought patterns and habits that contribute to your fear of being in a relationship.

They may also use systematic desensitization therapy, also called counterconditioning. This is when the therapist slowly exposes you to the idea of falling in love to desensitize you to your fear. They may give you real-world tasks as you get more comfortable with the idea of falling in love.

Hypnotherapy is not like the stage hypnosis shown in movies. It is more like a guided meditation that enables you to imagine yourself doing what you would like to do.

How to Find the Right Therapist to Work With

Finding the right therapist can be a process of trial and error. If you are ready to work with someone, start by researching different types of therapy so you'll understand how a particular therapist will approach working with you. Then, ask potential candidates about their specialties. You want someone that has experience and expertise in philophobia. Finally, make sure they have the proper licenses for your area.

If you don't feel comfortable with a particular therapist, try another. It's a good idea to trust your gut feeling about therapists. Following these tips, you can find someone who can work on your philophobia with you.

How to Work on Philophobia On Your Own

You can also do things on your own to help with your fear of falling in love. You can work on these exercises alone or with a therapist:

- Evaluate your relationship history to see if a past hurt is making you afraid of repeating the experience in a new relationship
- Identify negative voices in your head that prevent you from feeling happy in relationships
- Allow yourself to feel difficult emotions; that is how you can move through them
- Question or evaluate the preconceived notions you have about relationships
- Recognize where the defenses that prevent you from opening up to people come from ♦

How to Cut Calories from Your Favorite Recipes

Source: LIFEANDHEALTH.ORG

You might be known and loved by your kids, friends, and neighbors for a mac ‘n’ cheese or fudgy chocolate cake recipe that tastes incredible, but packs an unhealthy punch. You know this, and you want to do something about it.

But knowing how to lighten your favorite recipe can seem confusing. Should you replace all the butter with applesauce? Steam instead of deep-fry? Substitute low-calorie sweeteners for sugar? And after you’ve made all these adjustments, will you recognize your trusted treat?

No. No. No. And yes. The section below lists basic ways to lighten your favorite recipes, without making them unrecognizable. Rather than make every possible change to Aunt Dee’s Decadent Delight at the same time, try these modifications one at a time.

For example, in a breakfast bread recipe that calls for large quantities of sugar and butter, don’t try to use applesauce and prune puree instead. Chances are that the recipe will taste “funny,” and if you do eat it, each piece will remind you of what it could have been. So, try making smaller changes first, then tweak the recipe as you go.

Don’t worry: before your oatmeal raisin cookies turn into a handful of dry oatmeal with a raisin on top (the beginning of a great granola), remember that food should be enjoyed. We need a certain quantity of calories, fat, carbohydrates, etc. every day. The trick is to find healthful ways to make a dish’s flavors and nutritional profile complement each other. Also remember that when you embrace a more health-conscious lifestyle, your food preferences may gradually change, too—and that vegan granola might not look so bad, after all.

Dairy and dairy alternatives

Opt for low fat, fat-free products, or a combination of both, instead of full-fat dairy ingredients. For example, try using nonfat Greek yogurt instead of full-fat sour cream as a garnish for soup. Or, consider using a dairy alternative such as soymilk or almond milk, which will decrease the amount of saturated fat and cholesterol in the recipe overall.

Example:

- Try nonfat Greek yogurt instead of full-fat sour cream.
- Use soymilk or almond milk instead of milk
- You might notice: A thinner taste or mouth-feel, but it depends on the type of food. In baked goods such as breakfast breads, or many soups, the difference is hardly noticeable.

Butter and oils (fats)

“I would rather trust a cow than a chemist,” said Dr. Joan Gussow, a food pioneer who inspired Michael Pollan and Barbara Kingsolver. Whether or not you follow a vegan diet, Gussow’s ideas about natural, rather than processed, ingredients, still apply. Rather than trying to eliminate fat from your diet, look at ways to reduce it (but make sure you still get enough!).

Butter: In savory goods, if a recipe calls for copious amounts of butter, try replacing it with extra virgin olive oil, aka EVOO, coconut oil or canola oil that has not been genetically modified (labeled as non-GMO or containing no GMOs).

Example:

- Sauté garlic and onions in EVOO, instead of butter.
- Use EVOO instead of butter in dips, dressings, etc.
- Note: If you want to reduce the amount of olive oil, try using a nonstick frying pan and EVOO cooking spray, decreasing the amount of liquid EVOO you begin with.

In sweet baked goods, don’t try to eliminate all the butter at once.

Example:

- Decrease by half the amount of butter the recipe calls for.
- Substitute EVOO or canola oil for the other half.
- Replace up to half the fat with a fruit puree such as applesauce.
- Decrease slightly the amount of sweetener in the recipe.

You might notice: A less “rich” product, or a subtly different flavor from the oil. Try adjusting the proportions of butter to oil. And/or, embrace a lighter taste! See the end of this section for new flavors to enrich your favorite treat. To help reduce this potential effect, try adding healthful fats such as chopped nuts or even pureed vegetables to increase the recipe’s “rich” taste.

for a bedtime snack. You may think dark chocolate is a safe choice late in the day, as these bars are typically lower in sugar than milk chocolate. But chocolate is also a source of caffeine, a stimulant that disrupts the body's sleeping pattern throughout the night, says Kirkpatrick. And the darker the chocolate (the higher the percentage of cacao solids), the more caffeine it has.

5. Best: Cereal With Minimal Sugar and Low-Fat Milk

Pair a bowl of low-sugar cereal with some low-fat milk for a one-two punch. A cereal with minimal sugar (Kirkpatrick suggests looking for less than 5 grams [g] of sugar per serving and at least 3 g of fiber) provides the body with high-fiber carbs to keep you full, while low-fat milk offers the amino acid tryptophan. "Tryptophan produces serotonin in the body, which is converted into melatonin, inducing sleep," Kirkpatrick says.

6. Worst: Alcohol

Drinking alcohol before bed may help you fall asleep faster, but it won't help you stay asleep. "Drinking before bed actually disrupts the body's natural sleep cycle," Kirkpatrick says. Alcohol inhibits rapid eye movement (REM) sleep, a phase of deep, restorative sleep when vivid dreams occur.

This may cause you to wake up during the night and sleep either less deeply or for a shorter time. Alcohol's initial sedative effect also wears off once the alcohol is metabolized, and this can lead to sleep disruption, too.

Plus, "[drinking alcohol before bed] can lead to drowsiness the following day, making it difficult to complete daily functions," Kirkpatrick says.

7. Best: Yogurt

Dairy foods like yogurt contain melatonin, which improves sleep efficiency and reduces the number of episodes of awakening, Valdez says. Yogurt is rich in calcium, a bone-building mineral that also plays a role in processing hormones (like tryptophan and melatonin) that help you sleep. Just make sure you select plain, unsweetened yogurt, to which you can add fresh fruit, vanilla extract, or cinnamon.

8. Worst: Potato Chips

Potato chips are a classic late-night snack. But they're typically high in unhealthy fats and empty calories, says Valdez. In other words, potato chips provide plenty of calories and saturated fats, while offering few to no nutrients. A single cup has 140 calories and 8.8 g of fat (1.4 g from saturated fat).

Whole grains

Quinoa. Teff. Brown rice. Amaranth. Barley. Oatmeal. Whether you choose a familiar name or meet a new whole-grain friend, consider ways to add unrefined grains to your favorite recipes. You probably already know that whole grains are healthier than refined grains, because whole grains contain all the nutrients of the grain seed—bran, germ and endosperm—while "white" or refined grains no longer have their same natural composition (the nutrient-rich bran and germ are generally removed).

In baked goods, try replacing at least half the white flour with white whole wheat flour, or whole wheat pastry flour. The latter two are both whole wheat, but white whole wheat flour is more coarsely ground than whole wheat pastry flour, and contains more protein and gluten. Increase the ratio of whole grains to unrefined grains as the recipe permits. If you're feeling just a bit adventurous, try exploring less common whole grains (such as quinoa, teff or amaranth) and enjoy discovering a new carbohydrate-rich favorite.

Example:

- Use brown rice or wild rice instead of white rice.
- Try whole-grain bread or whole-grain breadcrumbs in stuffing or bread puddings.

You might notice: A denser texture in baked goods; play with the ratio of white to whole wheat, white whole wheat, or whole wheat pastry flour to achieve the desired texture. Avoid overmixing to help prevent an unappealingly dense texture. Benefits of whole grains include a heartier taste, and a richer, nuttier flavor.

Note: Make sure that your bread is 100 percent whole grain by checking the ingredients list. If you see "unbleached enriched flour," "enriched flour" or similar items, move onto the next package.

Change the produce proportions

One of the easiest ways to add vegetables and fruits to your diet is to simply add more of them to your recipes. Currently, the United States Department of Agriculture and Department of Health recommends that we fill half our plate with fruits and vegetables. Rather than focusing on the processed foods that healthier cooking decreases in your diet, concentrate on the deliciously wholesome foods that healthier eating encourages.

burnout,” says Dr. Doumas. “This can show up as chronic stress and even physical symptoms, while also reducing time for family connection.”

Signs That You May Need More Structure in Your Summer Routine

Dr. Doumas tells us, “If a child needs more structure, you will often see it in their disposition and physical state. They may become tired, cranky, and irritable, with noticeable disruptions to their sleeping or eating patterns. You might also see a loss of interest in connecting with others or an increase in general anxiety.”

Signs That It’s Time to Back Off From a Strict Summer Schedule

On the other hand, there are times your child may need some downtime. “Conversely, the primary sign that a parent may be over-scheduling is a simple lack of free time for play,” says Dr. Doumas. “Beyond that, you can spot the impact on your child’s health and mood. Signs of an overscheduled child include frequent irritability, moodiness, and complaints of headaches or stomachaches. They also may have a loss of interest in activities they once enjoyed or even become upset about having to go to them.”

Don’t Let Others Pressure You Into Thinking You Must Plan the Perfect Summer

We all fall into the trap of scrolling through social media and feeling we aren’t living up to everyone else’s “perfect” lives. The truth is, nobody’s life is perfect, and if it seems that way, it’s just an illusion. Dr. Doumas suggests, “Societal pressure to plan a ‘perfect summer’ is real, but we shouldn’t strive for perfection.”

She continues, “Instead, aiming for what is excellent for your unique family is a much better goal. This involves finding a balance of structured activity and free time that works for your children and for you. It’s helpful for parents to know that research supports the value of a more relaxed approach; you can and should shed the guilt of not creating a ‘magical’ summer every single day. Boredom is not a parenting failure; it is often the catalyst for creativity and self-discovery. Parenting is always a work in progress, so giving yourself grace, taking cues from your family, and adjusting as you go is the true path to a successful summer.”

Tips For a Healthy Summer Rhythm

Dr. Doumas offers us some suggestions for keeping the balance this summer. “One of the most effective ways to create a summer rhythm that works is to plan it with your children. Brainstorm a list of activities they would like to do, from big outings to simple things like baking or building a fort.”

Another tip is to let your kids brainstorm fun ideas with you. “When you involve children in creating the schedule, it gives them a sense of ownership and makes them far more likely to cooperate,” says Dr. Doumas. “This collaborative approach also models valuable life skills. And finally, remember to schedule downtime for yourself. A rested and rejuvenated parent is an important part of a happy family.” ♦

- Physical performance. Young men who fasted for 16 hours showed fat loss while maintaining muscle mass. Mice who were fed on alternate days showed better endurance in running.

- Type 2 diabetes and obesity. In animal studies, intermittent fasting prevented obesity. And, in six brief studies, obese adult humans lost weight through intermittent fasting. People with type 2 diabetes may benefit: Most of the available research shows that intermittent fasting can help people lose body weight and lower their levels of fasting glucose, fasting insulin and leptin while reducing insulin resistance, decreasing levels of leptin and increasing levels of adiponectin. Certain studies found that some patients practicing intermittent fasting with supervision by their doctors were able to reverse their need for insulin therapy.

- Tissue health. In animals, intermittent fasting reduced tissue damage during surgery and improved results.

“Many things happen during intermittent fasting that can protect organs against chronic diseases like type 2 diabetes, heart disease, age-related neurodegenerative disorders, even inflammatory bowel disease and many cancers,” Matton adds.

Is intermittent fasting safe?

Some people try intermittent fasting for weight management, and others use the method to address chronic conditions such as irritable bowel syndrome, high cholesterol or arthritis. Overall, research continues to indicate that it is a safe way to reduce weight. However, it’s important to check with your doctor before trying intermittent fasting.

Who shouldn’t try intermittent fasting?

- Children and teens under age 18.
- Women who are pregnant or breastfeeding.
- People with type 1 diabetes who take insulin. While an increasing number of clinical trials have shown that intermittent fasting is safe in people with type 2 diabetes, there have been no studies among people with type 1 diabetes. Mattson explains, “Because those with type 1 diabetes take insulin, there is a concern that an intermittent fasting eating pattern may result in unsafe levels of hypoglycemia during the fasting period.”
- Those with a history of eating disorders. People with a history of eating disorders are advised to avoid intermittent fasting because the strict fasting windows can trigger or worsen restrictive or obsessive food behaviors.

Are there side effects to intermittent fasting?

Keep in mind that intermittent fasting may have different effects on different people. Talk to your doctor if you start experiencing unusual anxiety, headaches, nausea or other symptoms after you start intermittent fasting.

How long can I practice intermittent fasting?

People not in the categories listed above, and who have discussed the diet with their doctor, can practice intermittent fasting safely on an ongoing basis. It can be a lifestyle change — and one with benefits. ♦ snacks cont.

Chips are also salty, “which can make a person even hungrier and lead to overeating,” Kirkpatrick says. If you’re not careful, you may take in more calories than you need, leading to weight gain over time.

9. Best: Roasted Chick Peas

Roasted chickpeas are a nutrient-dense, low-calorie snack that’s high in protein, fiber, vitamins, and minerals, Valdez says. This makes them a healthier alternative to salty snacks like potato chips. Plus, they help control blood sugar, which is crucial for sleep quality.

10. Worst: Fried Foods

Fried foods like chicken strips and french fries are high in fat, and fat takes longer to digest than carbs and protein. This is a bad idea when it comes to bedtime snacks. “Ingesting heavy, greasy foods before bed can shift the body’s focus away from sleep,” Kirkpatrick says.

“Fried foods are also more likely to induce heartburn and other discomforts, making it more difficult for the body to rest before bed,” she adds.

THE TAKEAWAY

- Many people reach for late-night snacks before bedtime, especially because hunger tends to increase when you’re tired.
- Snacks like ice cream, chocolate, and potato chips aren’t good options before bed because they’re often high in sugar and saturated fats, which can disrupt sleep.
- If you’re hungry before bed, opt for healthier options like yogurt, tart cherries, or nuts, as these are lower in calories and help induce sleep hormones like melatonin and tryptophan. ♦

Using a Digital Wallet

Source: SENIORSGUIDE.COM

With a digital wallet on your smartphone, you can use your credit and debit cards with a tap of the phone – no need to carry your cards or worry they might be stolen. We offer a simple overview of using a digital wallet, a useful technology for seniors and others.

Mobile wallets, which allow you to store debit and credit cards on your smartphone and pay for items with a single tap, are no longer just convenient. They're fast becoming the go-to method Americans use to pay for purchases in stores and online.

Nearly two in three Americans have now used a mobile wallet to make a purchase, including 60% of Gen Xers and 30% of baby boomers, LendingTree reports. Overall, use of digital wallets has nearly tripled in recent years, from an average of four payments made a month via mobile devices in 2018 to 11 a month in 2024, according to a Federal Reserve study last year.

The most compelling reason to use a digital wallet: It's safer than paying with a physical card. If crooks get their hands on a phone that's secured with a PIN – or better yet, biometric authentication such as a fingerprint or face scan – they'll have more trouble using it. Plus, mobile wallets use tokenization technology, which means a merchant (as well as a potential identity thief) sees only a virtual one-time token, rather than your card number.

“Even if there is some kind of compromise on that point-of-sale machine or somewhere down the line, your card data and information isn't compromised,” says Eva Velasquez, CEO of the Identity Theft Resource Center.

Steps in using a digital wallet

To get started using a digital wallet and make the most of the technology, experts recommend these steps.

Use your phone's built-in wallet.

Many retailers and brands now let you upload your debit and credit card info to their app and make digital payments that way, but you're better off limiting the number of mobile wallets that have your info. Instead, stick with the Apple Wallet or Google Wallet apps, which come preinstalled on iPhones and Androids, respectively. Both have strong, standardized security and better integration with device security than some other apps, Velasquez says.

Add your loyalty cards.

Retailers often allow you to upload your loyalty-program info to your digital wallet by tapping the “add to digital wallet” button in their app, clicking an email link, or scanning the physical card.

“That adds a lot of convenience because you're not carrying around this thick, physical wallet full of loyalty cards, credit cards, and your debit card,” says Sara Rathner, a credit cards expert with NerdWallet.

A bonus: Some retail loyalty programs will also send you push notifications for special offers and discounts when you're in or near a store where you have an account.

Watch for mobile-specific credit card rewards.

In most cases, using your rewards credit card in your mobile wallet will net you the same rewards as you'd get with the plastic version. But some issuers offer specific incentives for using their cards via a mobile wallet. The Kroger Rewards World Elite Mastercard pays 5% cash back on the first $3,000 in purchases through a mobile wallet and 2% after that. Last year, American Express ran a promotion offering cardholders a $5 statement credit for each of their first three purchases made via Apple Wallet.

Enable transaction alerts.

The downside of mobile wallets making it easier to buy stuff? It can also be easy to blow through your budget. One-third of mobile wallet users told LendingTree that they spend more when buying items with their phones than when they use a physical card.

One fix: Sign up for transaction alerts for all your mobile purchases, when asked. This will not only give you an early warning system for fraudulent charges, but it may also make you more mindful of how much you're spending, says Matt Schulz, chief consumer finance analyst with LendingTree.

Choose your default card carefully.

The first card you add to your digital wallet is the one automatically charged unless you select another card for a specific purchase. But you can designate a different card as your default.

"If you want to control your spending, you can put a single debit card in your mobile wallet and leave all your other cards out," Schulz says. "Or, if you are focused on rewards, lead with your favorite rewards credit card and go from there." ♦

Hidden Battles Over Custody, Overnights, and Child Support

By: SEAN HARDWICK, | FAMILY LAW ATTORNEY

Child support is the money paid by one parent to the other for the benefit of their child. In Florida, child support must be established in any divorce case involving minor children and in paternity cases involving children born outside of marriage. Because finances are often one of the most contested issues in family law matters, child support frequently becomes a source of significant disputes between parents.

How is child support calculated?

Child support is calculated based primarily on the following: (1) how much time each parent spends with the child, (2) how much income each parent makes, (3) payments made for childcare, (4) payments made for the child's medical expenses, and (5) some other limited expenses, which include, but are not limited to, travel. The parent paying child support does not have any control over how the other parent spends the child support money. Contrary to popular belief, payments for the child's sports, field trips, clothes, school supplies, and vacations are not considered when calculating child support.

Claiming the child for tax purposes also plays a major role. If a parent is required to pay child support and they get to claim the child on their taxes, they will pay the other parent more in child support. The opposite is also true; if a parent is receiving child support and they get to claim the child on their taxes, they will receive less in child support. In most cases, parents will alternate tax credits, but it is possible for one parent to claim the child on their taxes every year.

How does timesharing play a role in child support?

Timesharing plays a major role in determining child support. Generally speaking, the more overnights a parent has with the child, the lower their child support obligation may be. Likewise, the parent with more overnights will often receive more child support.

Unfortunately, some parents fight about spending more time with the child simply to get an advantage in child support. Florida calculates time based on the number of overnights the child spends with each parent. Therefore, if a parent sees their child every day, but the child never sleeps at their home, that parent is determined to have no time with the child for child support purposes. As a result, their child support will be substantially higher than if they had overnights with the child.

Because overnights directly impact child support calculations, disputes often arise over relatively small changes to the parenting schedule. However, minor differences in timesharing most likely do not significantly affect support. For example, a disagreement over a handful of additional days per year may have little financial impact, while a difference of several weeks or months can substantially change the child support amount.

Can child support be awarded when each parent has 50/50 timesharing?

Yes, child support can still be awarded even if both parents have equal time with the children. The Court still considers the other factors such as income, children's medical expenses, and childcare expenses. Therefore, if one parent makes a lot more than the other parent, that parent will most likely have to pay child support. However, if the parents make similar incomes and there are little to no child medical expenses or childcare expenses, then it is possible for neither parent to have to pay child support.

Can parents just agree to not pay or receive child support?

The short answer is no. Child support is required to be calculated in family law cases involving children. The intention of child support is to provide for the child's needs, and the idea is that one parent will need financial assistance from the other to properly provide for the child. However, if the child support amount calculated is $50 or less, the Court can determine that no child support needs to be paid. ♦

“Greater works you will do...” (it would be unfair to tell us to do greater works if He acted as God).

REMEMBER THAT JESUS EMPTIED HIMSELF OF ALL DIVINE POWERS AND HE STARTED HIS MINISTRY ONLY AFTER BEING FILLED WITH THE HOLY SPIRIT. JUS LIKE ALL CHRISTIANS. (excepting the ones that denied the Baptism of the Holy Spirit with fire and power?)

YES, JESUS DEFEATED SATAN AS A MERE MAN. God is proofing to us that Adam was equipped with all he needed to defeat Satan every time if He would stick to God’s Word in the first place, just like Jesus did. Just like all of us must do.

SO THEN WHAT KIND OF AUTHORITY WE HAVE IN ORDER TO DO THESE KIND OF WORKS?

ALL CHRISTIAN HAVE DELEGATED AUTHORITY FROM JESUS. ITS OUR BIRTHRIGHT WHEN WE ACCEPT JESUS AS OUR LORD AND SAVIOR. [John 1:12-13 and 2 Corinthians 5:17] BUT WE MUST GROW UP.

“And Jesus came and spoke to them, saying, “All authority has been given to Me in heaven and on earth. Go therefore [talking to you and to me] and make disciples of all the nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Spirit...” Matthew 28:18-19

AGAIN: “Later He appeared to the eleven as they sat at the table; and He rebuked their unbelief and hardness of heart, because they did not believe those who had seen Him after He had risen. And He said to them, “Go into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature. He who believes and is baptized will be saved; but he who does not believe will be condemned. And these signs will follow those who believe [All Christians]: In My name they will cast out demons; they will speak with new tongues; they will take up serpents; and if they drink anything deadly, it will by no means hurt them; they will lay hands on the sick, and they will recover.” Mark 16:14-18

“Behold, I give you the authority to trample on serpents and scorpions, and over all the power of the enemy, and nothing shall by any means hurt you.” Luke 10:19

IN CONCLUSION: Jesus destroyed Satan and his Kingdom as a mere man filled by the Holly Spirit, and we have been equipped the same: Wit a new nature and filled with the mighty Power of the Holy Spirit.

IF YOU ARE A CHRISTIAN YOU ARE COMMANDED TO RECEIVE POWER AND AUTHORITY TO BE ABLE, AND BE RELIABLE WITNESS AND PERFORM WHATEVER WORKS THE LORD DIRECTS YOU TO DO BY HIS MIGHT, THE HOLY SPIRIT.

“But you shall receive power when the Holy Spirit has come upon you; and you shall be witnesses to Me in Jerusalem, and in all Judea and Samaria, and to the end of the earth.” Acts 1:8.

Jesus is commanding us, after his resurrection and just before he ascended into heaven. BECOME A NEW CREATION AND BE FILLED WITH THE HOLLY SPIRIT: Let’s Pray out loud: Lord, I do believe that Jesus of Nazareth took my place in the Cross. Lord, I am sorry for all my sins, please forgive me. I believe Jesus was raised on the third day for my justification. Jesus, I receive you as my Lord and Savior. Your Holy blood cleanses me right now and God gives me a new heart and eternal

Brennan Eye Care

“Quality Eye Care you can Trust!”

Brennan Eye Care is proud to have served Okeechobee for over 40 years. As a Second generation optometrist, Dr. Christine Brennan Bishop is delighted to be providing quality eye exams to the families of our great community for the past 15 years. Dr. Bishop has been the owner of the practice since the summer of 2018. She continues to serve

Okeechobee with the company's family motto of “Quality Eye Care you can Trust!”

Dr. Brennan recently retired to spend more time with his grandchildren; along with more time to go fishing and hunting. Everyone knows Dr Brennan enjoys telling a good fish or hunting story. He has been serving the community and surrounding area for many decades and has passed that passion of serving, to his daughter.

Dr. Christine Bishop has been the president of the Treasure Coast Optometric Society for the past 10 years, which provides indigent eye care to our poorest residents. She is Vice President of the Health Council of SouthEast Florida, appointed by Okeechobee County Commission, to serve on this board and to represent Okeechobee in the five county coalition. Dr. Bishop is also the Membership Chair for the Okeechobee Chamber of Commerce.

Dr. Bishop has a passion for education and the children in our community. In August of 2022, she was elected to the Okeechobee County School Board and presently serves as the President of the Education Foundation of Okeechobee. Dr Bishop's most favorite activities are spending time with her husband and three beautiful daughters, along with serving at More 2 Life Church in Okeechobee. When you ask Dr. Bishop, how does she balance family, work, and community service? Her gentle smile and kind demeanor replies with a shrug saying “We are only given one life and my desire is to serve my family and community as Christ does, with love.”

Dr. Bishop has also begun lecturing around the state of Florida to her colleagues, using her real life experience and knowledge to provide insightful continuing education hours to fellow optometrists. She is thankful that through the years Brennan Eye Care has continued to offer the newest technology with a personalized small-town feel and she continues to strive to have you feeling like family when you walk in the door. You will leave knowing you have had the most thorough and comprehensive eye examination presently available to Optometrists today.

Brennan Eye Care has some big changes happening to their name, they have always provided quality eye exams for the whole family and now their name will reflect that dedication to serve patients of all ages.

Our office will soon be called: Family Eye Care of Okeechobee, This name encompasses their love to serve the families of Okeechobee and they promise everything else will stay the same, such as their amazingly loyal staff, with their willingness to help their patients to see clearly. They will continue to do so, and at a cost that will not break the bank. If you are ready to join our eye exam family, call today and make an appointment for you and your family. You will not be disappointed. ♦

Vegetables

- Increase the ratio of vegetables and/or legumes to pasta in your pasta salad. As a bonus, you'll add more flavor and fiber to the dish, which will help keep you full longer.
- Add more vegetables to your pizza, whether as extra toppings, or pureed (such as red peppers) in a tomato sauce.

Fruits

- Add fruits such as pomegranates and apples to salads.
- Add or increase the proportion of fruits like dried cherries in cookies.

You might notice: A more moist dish, especially if adding more vegetables or fruits to baked goods. If this becomes a problem, try decreasing the ratio of wet to dry ingredients.

Other notes:

As much as possible, include unprocessed, “whole” foods without a lot of salt, sugar or fat added. When a recipe calls for packaged or processed goods, such as breadcrumbs, opt for a brand that contains less salt, sugar or fat than most. This allows you to better control the final product's taste and nutritional value.

If one technique for lightening a recipe doesn't work, don't give up hope. Try a different variation, and look at similar recipes to see how others deal with, for example, vegan macaroni and cheese (hint: it can involve anything from cashew cheese to pureed cauliflower). Keep an open mind—and an open mouth. ♦
